Qualifications

Please describe your relevant analytical skills.

I spent my working career in the aerospace industry at Lockheed Martin, working on projects ranging from the Apollo moon landing, to the Space Shuttle. I also worked on the Space Telescope, later renamed the Hubble Space Telescope, and on several classified projects. I was a senior systems software engineer at retirement.

My analytical skills derived from the discipline of systems engineering, where one had to analyze more than one component of a system, but also the interaction of the various components on the entire system to ensure that the behavior of the entire system met the requirements levied on that system.

Coming up with an equitable set of boundary lines for the 10 districts of the city seems like a process that will benefit from a systems engineering approach.

Please describe your ability to be impartial.

I have served as an election judge in Travis County for several recent elections, and that job also requires one to be impartial when helping qualify voters. I feel that I have the ability to see the multiple facets of an argument, and make decisions based on facts rather than on pre-conceived notions. I view the impartiality required of this job akin to that of a juror deciding the fate of an accused individual. Both require an examination of the facts, and a judgement based on the facts.

Please describe your appreciation for the City of Austin's diverse demographics and geography.

I am a volunteer usher at various venues in Austin, including the Long Center, the Austin Symphony, and at Texas Performing Arts at the University of Texas. This has me working with people from all backgrounds, and interacting with the wide diversity of Austin residents. As a member of a minority group myself (of the Jewish faith) I am keenly aware of the need to be inclusive to all people, and to respect the differences of background, and points of view of people of Austin. This shift to single member districts will go a long way in broadening the representation of all the diverse groups that make up our great city. As the city grows, the diversity will only enhance the experience of calling Austin home.

Please provide any other information you wish to be considered during the selection of the most qualified applicants for the Commission.

I first moved to Austin in 1982, when Lockheed Austin Division was formed. My older son started 6th grade here, and my younger son began with kindergarten. Both boys graduated from the University of Texas, one with a Master's Degree and the other with a Bachelors. When I was transferred to the Denver area in 1996, when Lockheed Martin closed up shop in Austin, I realized that Austin had truly become home. When I retired from Lockheed Martin, my wife and I returned to Austin, for good.

I would like to be a part of the change of Austin for the better, with the single member districts implementation.

Thank you for your consideration.
